

Easter SAFETY

AND FUN ACTIVITIES TO ENJOY WITH YOUR PET

Hands up if you're planning on tucking into lots of scrummy chocolate this Easter?! How many eggs are you hoping for? And will you be taking part in an Easter egg hunt (without your pets - we don't want them getting their paws on your chocolate!)?

Now, as much as you can enjoy tucking into some sweet treats, let's not forget that chocolate is TOXIC to our pets because of an ingredient called theobromine. So, we know you like to share with your best furry friends, but this is something you can't share with them! When you're not eating your chocolate, make sure it's stashed safely away out of paw's reach!

But is it just chocolate we need to keep away from our pets at this time of year? No, it's not! Here are a few other things you need to avoid to keep your pets safe...

EASTER LILIES

Lilies are another danger for our pets. They're highly toxic to cats in particular, so although they're a popular Easter flower, let's try to avoid them completely in homes we share with our beloved pets!

HOT CROSS BUNS

Hot cross buns, tasty as they are, contain raisins, currants and sultanas - all of which are poisonous to our pets.

EASTER BASKET GRASS

If you're treated to a lovely Easter basket, they often have some pretty plastic grass in them. This is something else that can be very tempting for our four-legged friends to chew on, so keep it safely out of their way!

Fun Easter Activities for you and your pet

Plan a dog-friendly Easter egg hunt

We know that you can't share your chocolate Easter eggs with your dogs, so why not hide their favourite treats - and maybe their fave toys too - around your home and garden and you can have fun hunting those together! We promise your dog will love it!

Make your pet their own Easter basket

You can fill it with some tasty treats and some new toys!

Hold a 'pawsome' Easter party!

We can't think of many better parties than a party with our pets! Plan some fun games that you can enjoy together. What can you come up with?

Enjoy an Easter picnic with your pup

Get the family together and get out exploring over the Easter weekend! While you're out having fun, take some time out, 'paws' and enjoy a picnic.
